Scotland's Welcome

An analysis of community support for refugee integration

This report presents and analyses data from a mapping exercise of community support for refugee integration across Scotland. The mapping exercise was conducted for two primary purposes: to support the development and delivery of the New Scots Connect project – a physical and digital network of refugee-assisting third sector organisations in Scotland; and to support responses to two actions in the New Scot's refugee integration strategy 2018-2022 – to map and assess existing local and national refugee integration projects and develop new initiatives and to specifically map and assess individual mentoring and orientation schemes and explore the viability of expanding to all refugees in Scotland.

What is New Scots Connect?

New Scots Connect is part of Scottish Refugee Council's 'New Scots: Rights & Communities', an EU-funded programme to welcome New Scots to communities across the country. New Scots Connect's digital map is the first ever national digital map to present, link and support community groups in Scotland working with refugees. Behind the digital map is a communications platform for groups to share information with each other. The New Scots Connect map is hosted on the Scottish Refugee Council website and allows organisations to promote their work, and New Scots to identify organisations that can support them in their communities.

What is the New Scots Refugee Integration Strategy 2018-2020?

Created in partnership with the Scottish Government, COSLA (Convention of Scottish Local Authorities), and the Scottish Refugee Council, it is a nationwide strategy that aims to create a Scotland where refugee and asylum seekers' integration starts on the first day they come to this country.

The strategy:

“sets out a vision for a welcoming Scotland where refugees and asylum seekers are able to rebuild their lives from the day they arrive. The strategy commits to better access to essential services such as education, housing, health and employment.

It recognises the skills, knowledge and resilience which refugees bring and aims to help people to settle, become part of the community, and pursue their ambitions.”¹

Research Objectives

1. To analyse the captured mapped data against the original desk-based research.
2. To analyse the nature of different organisations providing support to refugees in Scotland.
3. To identify type of (funded and non-funded) integration activity being conducted in Scotland.
4. To identify the beneficiaries supported by integration activities in Scotland.
5. To validate / amend descriptions of integration practice and organisation type.
6. To identify future priorities for New Scots Connect

Research Questions

- What is Scotland's social capital / community infrastructure for supporting refugees?
- What types of organisations are delivering integration support in Scotland?
- What type of integration activity are they delivering?
- Who are the beneficiaries of their activity?
- What gaps are there in terms of support (geographic, type)?
- Are the descriptions of types of communities and their activity the right ones?

Methodology and Assumptions

Data was initially gathered using information available from the Scottish Charity Regulator (OSCR) to analyse charities registered with the regulatory body and internal data from Scottish Refugee Council as part of an initial mapping exercise used to support the AMIF funding application. As part of the New Scots: Rights & Communities, Regional Integration Coordinators (RICs) were recruited to support community groups across Scotland by building capacity of these organisations through training programmes and creating links and signposting organisations to others in their areas to further support New Scots. These RICs used the creation of the NS Connect platform as a means to introduce themselves to organisations in their regions. Section 1 of this report details this initial mapping.

To effectively map all organisations, descriptors and taxonomies of activity were developed in consultation with the New Scots Communities, Culture and Social Connections Thematic Group. Organisations were invited to complete an online form² promoted online and by the RICs to sign up to both the map and digital communications platform. The network New Scots Connect was launched on the 30th of January by Aileen Campbell, the Scottish Government Cabinet Secretary for Communities, and community groups and third sector organisations were encouraged to complete an online form to join the digital map and forum.

From this initial mapping, 165 organisations had signed up to the platform at the start of October 2019. This analysis focuses on data from 163 organisation, as two organisations (a law firm and COSLA Strategic Migration Partnership) were removed from the data analysis. Both the map and the digital forum are for community organisations, third sector organisations, charities and social enterprises working with refugees, and the team at Scottish Refugee Council have ensured that no businesses are able to access these platforms to advertise their products or services.

Organisations were asked to select what type of organisation they were (charity, community group etc.) and activity they carry out (information and advice, ESOL etc.). Many also used 'other' to describe their type of organisation or activity. This data was cleaned and activities that were outwith the taxonomy have been recoded to predefined taxonomies, and three new taxonomies of activities were created to better represent the work identified by organisations in the 'other': section.

Organisations also identify as multiple types (a charity social enterprise that has been contracted by the local authority for example), and multiple activities (information and advice, ESOL and Language Café) and this is reflected in the data presented in this document.

This report uses the numbers of the Research Objectives and letters of the Research Questions to aid understanding.

Report Layout

The report is laid out in sections, within which a series of tables and charts are presented to address specific Research Objectives and Questions followed by an analysis and commentary on the salient points.

Research Questions

What is Scotland's social capital / community infrastructure for supporting refugees?

New Scots are supported by a diverse range of organisations providing various different integration activities to support them into our communities. Over 160 organisations offer 19 different services, from advice and information to befriending. Organisations also work to reduce prejudice faced by refugees and provide policy support and research to further support refugee integration.

What types of organisations are delivering integration support in Scotland?

There is a large number of organisations providing support services to refugees in Scotland. Over half - 54% - of these organisations are registered charities. Refugee-led community groups also play an important role with 21% of organisations across Scotland, particularly in Glasgow where 68% of refugee-led community groups are based.

What type of integration activity are they delivering?

Organisations reported to be providing 19 different integration activities, mainly social and cultural activities for refugees, followed by advice and information services. On average organisations provided six different integration activities to r efugees highlighting the wide range of support activities organisations provide to refugees.

Who are the beneficiaries of their activity?

Organisations provide a wide range of services to different beneficiaries. People with mental health/ physical health disabilities receive the least amount of support. Mental health support is a topic that our Regional Integration Coordinators have highlighted that more clients need support in.

What gaps are there in terms of support (geographic, type)?

The majority of organisations from the dataset are based in Glasgow and the south west of Scotland, with the fewest organisations mapped in the north east of Scotland. Given the fact that this region covers Aberdeen, Aberdeenshire and Dundee this could highlight a gap in service provision in this area.

Are the descriptions of types of communities and their activity the right ones?

The taxonomy of activities and groups were agreed with the Communities and Culture Thematic Group. The initial taxonomy of type of organisations numbered ten, however this rose to 26 when taking into account those who used the 'other' field. For activities, most organisations' integration activities were able to be categorised using the initial list of integration activities, and four have been added to best represent the breadth and scope of work carried out by organisations to support New Scots.

Section 1

Table showing the extracted mapped data against the original desk-based research

Table 1

Category	Number
Total number of active organisations on original (OSCR) list and Scottish Refugee Council Internal Data	187
Number of organisations on OSCR list without contact details	26
Potential number of organisations for NSConnect mapping	161
Total number of organisations mapped on NSConnect	165
Number of organisations matched, by organisation name, with entries on OSCR list	65
Number of potential organisations on OSCR list to be mapped	96

It should be noted that the OSCR register is for 'charities' only, whereas on NSConnect, groups were able to use a wide range of organisation descriptors. Thus, only a subset of entries on NSConnect were ever going to match against the OSCR extract.

The original OSCR list was used by the Regional Integration Co-ordinators (RICs) to start to build their community connections and advocate registering for NSConnect. This exercise would have resulted in one of three outcomes:

- No response – so presumed inactive;
- Agreed to register with NSConnect; or
- Declined to register with NSConnect.

It may be of some value to re-investigate the 96 unmatched OSCR entries to see if those who declined are now willing to register for and participate in NSConnect, once it is online and visible. This could extend the reach of our services and support across the country.

Commentary

The original list of organisations put forward as part of the AMIF proposal was based primarily on an extract of the Scottish Charity Regulator (OSCR) register. The data was then organised by regions and research carried out to see if the organisations were still active and if so, to extract relevant information. Ten records are marked on the extract as inactive.

Unfortunately, the charity number was not retained on the extract and, as a result, organisation name was used to match groups on NSConnect with the OSCR list. This introduced a slight problem, as there were a small number of organisations with similar but not identical names. These were not included in the count of matched records.

Findings

Our initial mapping shows there are 163 organisations working in Scotland to support refugees, with the majority of organisations based in the South West of the country.

Commentary

163 organisations are registered on NS Connect (as at 1st October 2019) using 26 different organisation ‘descriptors’. There was an initial list of ten provided, most of which were presented to them on the original registration on-line form, and many used the ‘other’ option to describe themselves, resulting in an extra 17 descriptors. Most organisations fitted into the initial ten provided, and the other descriptors provided show the wider range of organisations who have registered online and the breadth of organisations working to support refugees in Scotland.

60% (98) of organisations identified themselves with one descriptor, with 21% describing themselves as two, and 20% with three or more, up to a maximum of eight descriptors. This means for example that in Glasgow there are 69 organisations, and 134 descriptors used for these organisations.

The data shows that across Scotland, charities are the largest provider of services to New Scots in each region.

Based on the ‘regions’ of Scotland, defined for the New Scots: Rights & Communities programme and covered by the Regional Integration Co-ordinators, these 163 groups are distributed as follows³:

Region	Number of organisations	% of national total
Glasgow	69	42%
South East	26	16%
South West	25	15%
North West	24	15%
North East	19	12%

This distribution is unsurprising given the key role Glasgow has in the history of refugee and asylum seeker placement in Scotland.

This is further borne out by the fact that 68% (23) organisations which described themselves as Refugee-Led communities are registered in Glasgow. Of the remaining Refugee-Led communities, 12% (4) are in the North West and South West, with one in the North East and two in the South East.

Again this is unsurprising given that relatively small numbers of families were dispersed across all 32 Local Authorities in Scotland as part of the Syrian Vulnerable Persons Resettlement programme. The priorities and lack of numbers of these widely distributed families makes constituting a formal community group quite difficult.

3 A breakdown of these regions is included in Appendix III

People resettled under the Vulnerable Persons Resettlement Scheme (VPRS) and Vulnerable Children Resettlement Scheme (VCRS) By Local Authority till Q2 2019.

The above table shows the spread of people resettled under VRPS and VCRS, and this shows a fairly consistent number of people resettled in the South East, South West and North East region, with Glasgow and the North West having fewer refugees resettled under these Schemes. As the number of organisations supporting refugees is lower in the North East (12% of National total) this could suggest a gap in service provision in this region.

Activities of organisations

Organisations were asked to provide information on what activities they carry out. On average organisations reported carrying out six types of activities, with a minimum of one, to a maximum of 16. Many organisations used the other box to describe their activities, and as part of the data cleaning exercise these were put into categories that best represented their work. In order to reflect this, three new taxonomies were added to the list below. One organisation did not provide any activities.

Commentary

The taxonomy of integration activities used on the NSConnect registration form was devised by the New Scots Integration Strategy: Communities Thematic Group. The data was cleaned to incorporate the information into taxonomies, and four new taxonomies were added to represent activities that are being carried out. These are:

- New – Community engagement/Training
- New – Volunteer advice/opportunities for refugees
- New – Faith-based activities
- New – Research and Policy

The integration activity data has also been the subject of a data cleanse exercise to validate and remove duplicate data. The vast majority of cleansed data was available when the extract was taken.

This first table shows the number of groups who indicated they provided the integration activity, nationally and then split by region.

At the national level:

- Around 2/3 of groups deliver social and cultural activities as well as providing advice and information. What these advice services cover and where they get their information from should be further researched so that NSConnect becomes the centre for up to date information and FAQs on advice.
- More than 1/3 of groups deliver reducing prejudice / informing people about refugees, sports activities, community preparation / welcoming activities or children's activities. Activities outwith the taxonomy will be covered below.
- Reducing prejudice and informing people about refugees is seen as a significant integration activity by 46% of groups and presents an opportunity to learn from their experiences and encourage other groups to undertake this activity. A similar exercise for community preparation and welcoming activities should also be undertaken, if further placement of Syrian refugees is anticipated, to increase the number of groups (38%) delivering this activity.
- Less than 1/3 of the groups provide the remaining nine integration activities. A possible explanation is that these integration activities are more one-on-one activities. (supporting people into employment, befriending, mentoring, individual advocacy etc.) and thus require rigorous processes and specialist knowledge to deliver these services.

The next table looks at the same data but this time as percentages of their total group numbers, nationally and by region. The national percentage is used as the 'benchmark' for each integration activity which each regional figure is compared against to reveal any 'gaps'. Again, activities outwith the taxonomy are ignored.

The table opposite reformats the data sorted on the number of groups providing each integration activity. This allows us to determine whether there are any gaps in service provision.

Integration activities highlighted in blue show a fairly consistent distribution and are thus considered not an issue. Those activities highlighted in yellow represent the 'gaps' – that is, there are fewer groups in that region delivering this integration activity than the national 'benchmark'.

New – Faith Based activities	1%	0%	0%	4%	0%	4%
New – Research and Policy	1%	0%	0%	0%	4%	0%

It can be seen that the North East region has the most gaps in the provision of integration activities compared with the benchmark figure. In addition, the South East region is weak on ESOL and Language cafe / language practice; whilst in the South West region social and cultural activities and community preparation activities are significantly below the benchmark.

An exercise to determine the impact of these ‘gaps’ and whether the New Scots: Rights & Communities programme can help plug them should be undertaken.

Tables showing funding by region and nationally

Table 4 shows the national position of funding by organisation by region

South West	25	3	12%	9	36%	13	52%	0
	163	18	11%	36	22%	69	42%	40

Findings

The majority of groups in Scotland providing support for New Scots are self-funded, with only 11% of organisations reporting that they receive all of their funding from the Local Authority.

Commentary

The funding categories are defined as:

- Self-funded. The group obtains their funds from donations, contributions, fundraising and by applying for grants (from any source).
- Part funded. The group receives some funding from their Local Authority to provide services but also self-funds other elements of their services.
- Fully funded. The group receives all their funding from the Local Authority.

How an organisation is funded was missed from the original online registration form and has had to be collected by the RICs contacting each organisation. This proved quite difficult and 40 groups did not wish to disclose this information. Two regions, North East and South East, account for 29 of these 40 groups.

In total, 69 groups across Scotland declared themselves self-funded and 36 part-funded.

Funding on its own is a useful piece of information, however, it needs to be used when investigating the gaps in the provision of integration activities and services to specialised groups to aid funding decisions. This could be a topic for further research or more detailed analysis in the future.

Findings

Most organisations reported providing support to Women and Girls and Young People, with the North East having the lowest provision of groups supporting people with special characteristics.

Commentary

84 of the 163 organisations specified that they provided services for ‘special’ groups with Women and Girls and Children and Young People being the two most frequently selected (55 organisations for each special group). 28 organisations stated they provided services to Older People and 24 for those with mental/physical health difficulties. 81 organisations did not state they provided services for special groups.

The following table details the level of service provision in the regions for the four main special groups.

Region	Children and young people (Under 18)	Older people	People with mental/ physical health difficulties	Women and girls	Total
Glasgow	23	9	7	25	54
North East	7	2	4	4	17
North West	8	6	3	7	24
South East	8	4	4	9	25
South West	9	7	6	9	31
Total	55	28	24	54

The table illustrates that the North East region has the fewest number of organisations that support three of the four special groups, with the North West lowest for the provision of services for People with mental and physical health difficulties.

Section 6

A gap analysis of integration activity based on type of activity, funding and region

This analysis of gaps needs to take into account potential gaps in data collection from community groups in the North East and South East of Scotland, as there may be groups who were missed as part of the initial mapping exercise. With this in mind, the following analysis looks at gaps using the current dataset available.

Type of Activity

With 19 different integration activities being offered by 163 groups, there are a range of services being offered by community groups and third sector organisations to support New Scots. Only 45% of organisations reported supporting refugees into finding employment. From Scottish Refugee Council’s work as part of our integration service, finding employment after receiving status is a key priority for many refugees. Strengthening employability services and provisions across Scotland would benefit refugees and help build social connections.

51% of organisations also report to providing health and wellbeing services. Specific mental health services are not included in the taxonomy, however with the complex needs of many refugees who have fled from distressing circumstances, more services could be offered to address the mental health needs of refugees. This would also correspond to feedback received from our RICs who also have highlighted the lack of mental health provision for refugees across Scotland.

Type of Funding

Forty groups did not respond to requests for data on the type of funding they receive; however the current dataset shows that the majority of organisations are self-funded, and do not receive grants from the local authority for the services they provide. This is an interesting statistic as it highlights the amount of work that is being carried out by the third sector to support New Scots that is not funded through statutory bodies. Organisations on this map range from small-scale community groups to larger, well-established and known organisations, and the lack of funding provided by local authorities highlights the precarious nature of the sector. Further research should be carried out to consider if any of the services provided by these third sector organisations should be funded or supported by local authorities.

By Region

Overall the majority of organisations are based in the South West of Scotland, and this report has highlighted why this has historically been the case. The North East and South East of Scotland have fewer organisations supporting New Scots, and further research needs to be carried out to see if this is due to gaps in the data or if there are fewer organisations in these regions supporting New Scots.

Befriending

26% of organisations across Scotland offer a befriending service, however this falls as low as 16% in the North East of Scotland. Befriending services help to tackle social isolation, and enlist local people to support New Scots to access services in their local area. Further research should be carried out to analyse the types of befriending programmes that are offered throughout Scotland and to consider if there are any similarities in the models used to support New Scots.

Tables showing analysis and additions to taxonomy of integration activities and special groups

Registered Activities Outwith Taxonomy of Integration Activities

The following list details those activities listed by groups registered on NSConnect in answer to the question ‘Do you provide any other integration activities’. Originally, 63 were recorded, but on compiling this list this number has expanded to 74 due to re-interpretation of what was written (e.g. Cross-Culture integration and challenging negative misconceptions of Refugees and Migrants was originally one activity but now are two). No attempt has been made to consolidate the list at this point, thus each line reflects one group which delivers this integration activity. An exercise to review, consolidate and determine whether these activities or a superset describing several similar activities (e.g. volunteering) are added to the taxonomy should be undertaken. The responses have been sorted alphabetically to aid this process.
